Learn how to protect your intellectual property.

Whether your intellectual property is a trademark, copyright, domain name, trade secret, proprietary technology or other type of valuable know-how, you'll want to attend this seminar. For many businesses, their intellectual property is their most valued asset.

Attorney Michael Caywood of Dresser, Dresser, Haas & Caywood, P.C. will lead attendees through the topics in a general and basic manner, enabling them to have a better understanding of intellectual property, and how to protect their interests and benefit their business.

Presented by:  Sponsored by: Sturgis Improvement Association

Michael Caywood, Esq.

Michael Caywood began practicing law in 1991 and joined Dresser, Dresser, Haas & Caywood, P.C. in 1999. Prior to moving to Sturgis, Michael practiced in Phoenix at the law firm of Snell & Wilmer and in Chicago with Ungaretti & Harris and the Division of Enforcement for the United States Securities and Exchange Commission. Michael's practice includes Intellectual Property (trademark, copyright, and trade secrets), commercial and other civil litigation in both State and Federal Courts, Probate and Trust disputes, Business Law, and technology and other business transactions.

Michael received his Bachelor of Arts in 1988 from the University of Michigan. In 1991, he received his Juris Doctor with distinction from the University of Iowa College of Law. In addition to Michigan, Michael is licensed to practice in Indiana, Illinois, Arizona and the District of Columbia. Michael participates in the Litigation, Intellectual Property, Business, and Science and Technology sections of the Michigan State Bar Association. He is a past President of the St. Joseph County Bar Association and is a court-approved mediator in Michigan.
